Walrus Skin Money

by Ted Uhl, NLG

Organized in 1799 under charter from Czar Paul I, the Russian-American Company set up headquarters at the rich sea otter grounds of the Alexander Archipelago at Sitka on Baranof Island in southern Alaska. Thus the stage was set for the issuance in 1816 of what may well be the world's most fascinating currency — Walrus Skin money.

Erroneously referred to as "Sealskin" money, these notes were produced by a most ingenious method. Otter skins were shipped by the R.A.C. to China in waterproof bags made of walrus skin.

The bags were removed at the Chinese ports and reused to wrap shipments of spices, teas, etc. bound for Russian ports. Because of the variety of products shipped in them, the walrus bags were affected in different ways, accounting for the variety of colors in the skins.

At the Russian ports the bags were removed again and select pieces were cut from them and stamped with the value and devices of the R.A.C. for use as money in the North American colony.

Called Kozhanye (skins), the notes were produced until the 1830's. During those years three issues, totalling 102,000 rubles, circulated at company settlements as far south as what is now central California. Known denominations include the 10, 25 and 50-kopeks, and 1, 5, 10 and 25-rubles. These are all catalogued under item 53, page 253 in the Kardakoff catalog (see Bibliography).

Apparently the first issue included notes in color. The low numbered pieces are known in shades of blue, brown, red and tan, while the later notes occur mostly with black printing on light colored parchment.

It is known that this currency was designed for easy identification by the locals who, for the most part, could neither read nor write. The 10-kopek notes can be identified by holes punched in both upper corners, while the 25-kopek notes are clipped on all four corners. The 50-kopek denomination is clipped on the top corners only and the higher values, in rubles, are all rectangular in shape.

Alaska was purchased from Russia by the United States in 1867, at which time all remaining Russian-American Company notes were redeemed with Russian state credit notes.

Pictured herewith is the only known example of the 25-ruble note. It is similar in design to the other "skins" bearing the R.A.C. seal on the face and a machine-turned oval on the back, with the words NOTE IN AMERICA 25 RUBLES (in Cyrillic text) and the handwritten number.

This note has the later style eagle as opposed to the "maritime eagle" of the other issues, and also a round seal instead of the standard oval type of the other denominations. Additionally, the text within the seal is completely spelled out, translating as UNDER THE HIGH PATRONAGE OF HIS IMPERIAL MAJESTY.

Measuring 66 by 90 millimeters, the specimen has black printing on yellowish-tan parchment with the hand-inked serial number 1060 in black. Originally part of the Brussels or Pflumer collection, this major rarity now belongs to the author.

The following compilation is the most complete census of the known Walrus Skin notes.

47. Same bank, 0.09c, 2-1-1879. With the issuance of these notes the president at that time, Avellanda, withdrew all silver currency from the provinces of Salta, Tucuman, etc. to Buenos Ayres. He then introduced a gold currency, exchanged the provisional paper currency for new notes which were stated to be on a gold basis but which soon represented only a paper currency. The 0.09c issue specially served for the redemption of a small Bolivian issue of silver coinage. The 0.04c is not specifically referred to in connection with the redemption of the Bolivian currency but it may be assumed that these notes were used for the same purpose as the 0.09c. ## 25 RUBLE NOTES

1060; black; Ted Uhl collection.
* Denotes the five notes of the Moscow Historical Museum with known serial numbers. There was a total of 11 notes in the archives discovery.

The above listed notes total 47, including five from the recent find by the Moscow Historical Museum. There are six other notes from that find not listed above, making the total known figure 53. The Moscow find consisted of three 10-kopek, one 25-kopek, one 50-kopek, two 1-ruble, two 5-ruble, and two 10-ruble notes.

A few of the recent prices for these Alaskan notes indicate all are of the highest rarity and desirability. Both the 10-kopek, number 26313, and the 50-kopek, 13989 recently sold at more than $10,000 each.

My gratitude to John J. Ford, Lester Merkin, Neil Shafer, Russ Rulau and Cedric Stanier for their valuable contributions to the above census of walrus skin notes.
